

2017-2018 HISTORY MINOR

(Minimum of five course credits)

A minor in History provides a broad perspective on the human past, with a view to understanding how people behave, and of what they have been, and are, capable of as individuals and as communities. Such a background provides a helpful complement to almost any major, and a useful foundation from which to move into a variety of fields, particularly professions that require an understanding of human activity: the ministry, journalism, law, business, and teaching. The History minor is extremely flexible, requiring the introductory course to provide a foundation in research methods and principles of interpretation, and then other courses of the student's choice.

Requirements

The following HIS course:

HIS 200: Introduction to Historical Study _____ 1

AND

Any four (4) additional HIS course credits selected by the student in consultation with the Academic Advisor for the minor:

HIS _____ : _____ _____ 1

HIS _____ : _____ _____ 1

HIS _____ : _____ _____ 1

Exploring the Minor—Students considering History as a minor should begin exploring the discipline through any of the several introductory courses, choosing one or more that appeals to them. Most 100-level or 200-level courses, except for HIS 200, can serve this purpose.
